Re: Status Update - Bills Tracked by AIA Massachusetts

During every session of the General Court (the Legislature) – which takes two years to complete – there is a biennial legislative deadline known as Joint Rule 10 days. With minor exceptions, on this day – which always falls on the first Wednesday in February of the second year of the two-year sessions – all committees must make a final report on all bills referred to their committees. This year, that day was Feb. 7th.

In broad terms, and for use as a "Key" for the Status column, the committees can take the following actions:

- Report a bill out favorably;
- Report a bill out unfavorably:
- Attached to a favorable report The committee combines multiple bills on similar subjects into one new bill and reports out favorably;
- Accompanied study order A euphemism essentially meaning the bill is dead and will not move forward this session and
- Extension order filed (until XX/XX/XXXX) This provides the committee with additional time to consider whether to take further action on the bill or not

Despite the Joint Rule 10 deadline's intent to clarify the fate of bills, it often serves more as a suggestion due to the Legislature's tendency to procrastinate, with many bills remaining in limbo pending extension orders. Such orders may not necessarily indicate a lack of support, as evidenced by previous sessions where bills delayed past Joint Rule 10 day eventually gained traction and became significant legislative achievements, such as the bill allowing Massachusetts residents without legal immigration status to obtain driver's licenses.
